But to use the entire program you have to purchase it with one of two options available: an annual license or a lifetime license priced at $39.95 and $49.95 respectively. Software creators insist that deleted data should not be lost. They guarantee that documents can be recovered if they have been removed, if they have disappeared due to a virus, system failure, memory card problems or, among other things, a mobile phone malfunction. While the situation can be complex, so it involves the process of flashing ROM, the program is also responsible for enabling users to recover the data they have lost. The same goes for losses after a dramatic update to the operating system. The program uses different methods of restoring information. Lost. One is scanning the internal memory of a mobile phone in search of residue left behind by deleted files. Another method is based on the same on the SD memory card and finally the program can also extract data from mobile phones that no longer work. The system allows you to view files that will be recovered, giving the opportunity for users to be selective with them. The whole process is done with a level of security that ensures that there will be no privacy issues in the user's data. Starting with the use of the software allows that messages on the mobile phone, photos, videos, audio files and contact books can be restored in full. There is also support for the recovery of mobile documents and call log. Another of the most used support software is one related to the recovery of profiles and messages, as well as received files, in the Messaging app WhatsApp. The system to achieve this is identical to whether the recoverable files in the terminal's memory are. The program can be used on both computers that have the Windows operating system and Mac OS X, with minimal versions requiring XP and 10.12 respectively. Technically, the computer must have a 1GHz processor, 256MB of RAM and 200MB of hard drive storage. HomePre on MEDIAFIRE - DOWNLOAD DR.
